Origins

“To drink bitter t’u constantly makes one think better.”

The earliest recorded reference to tea.
A medical text by Hua T’o, 3rd century AD.

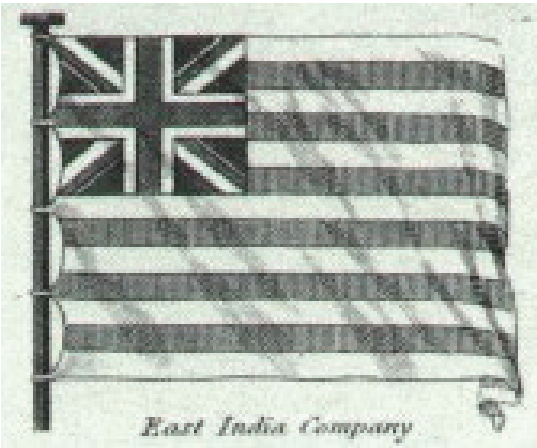
12th Century AD

“Humanity so far has met in the tea-cup”

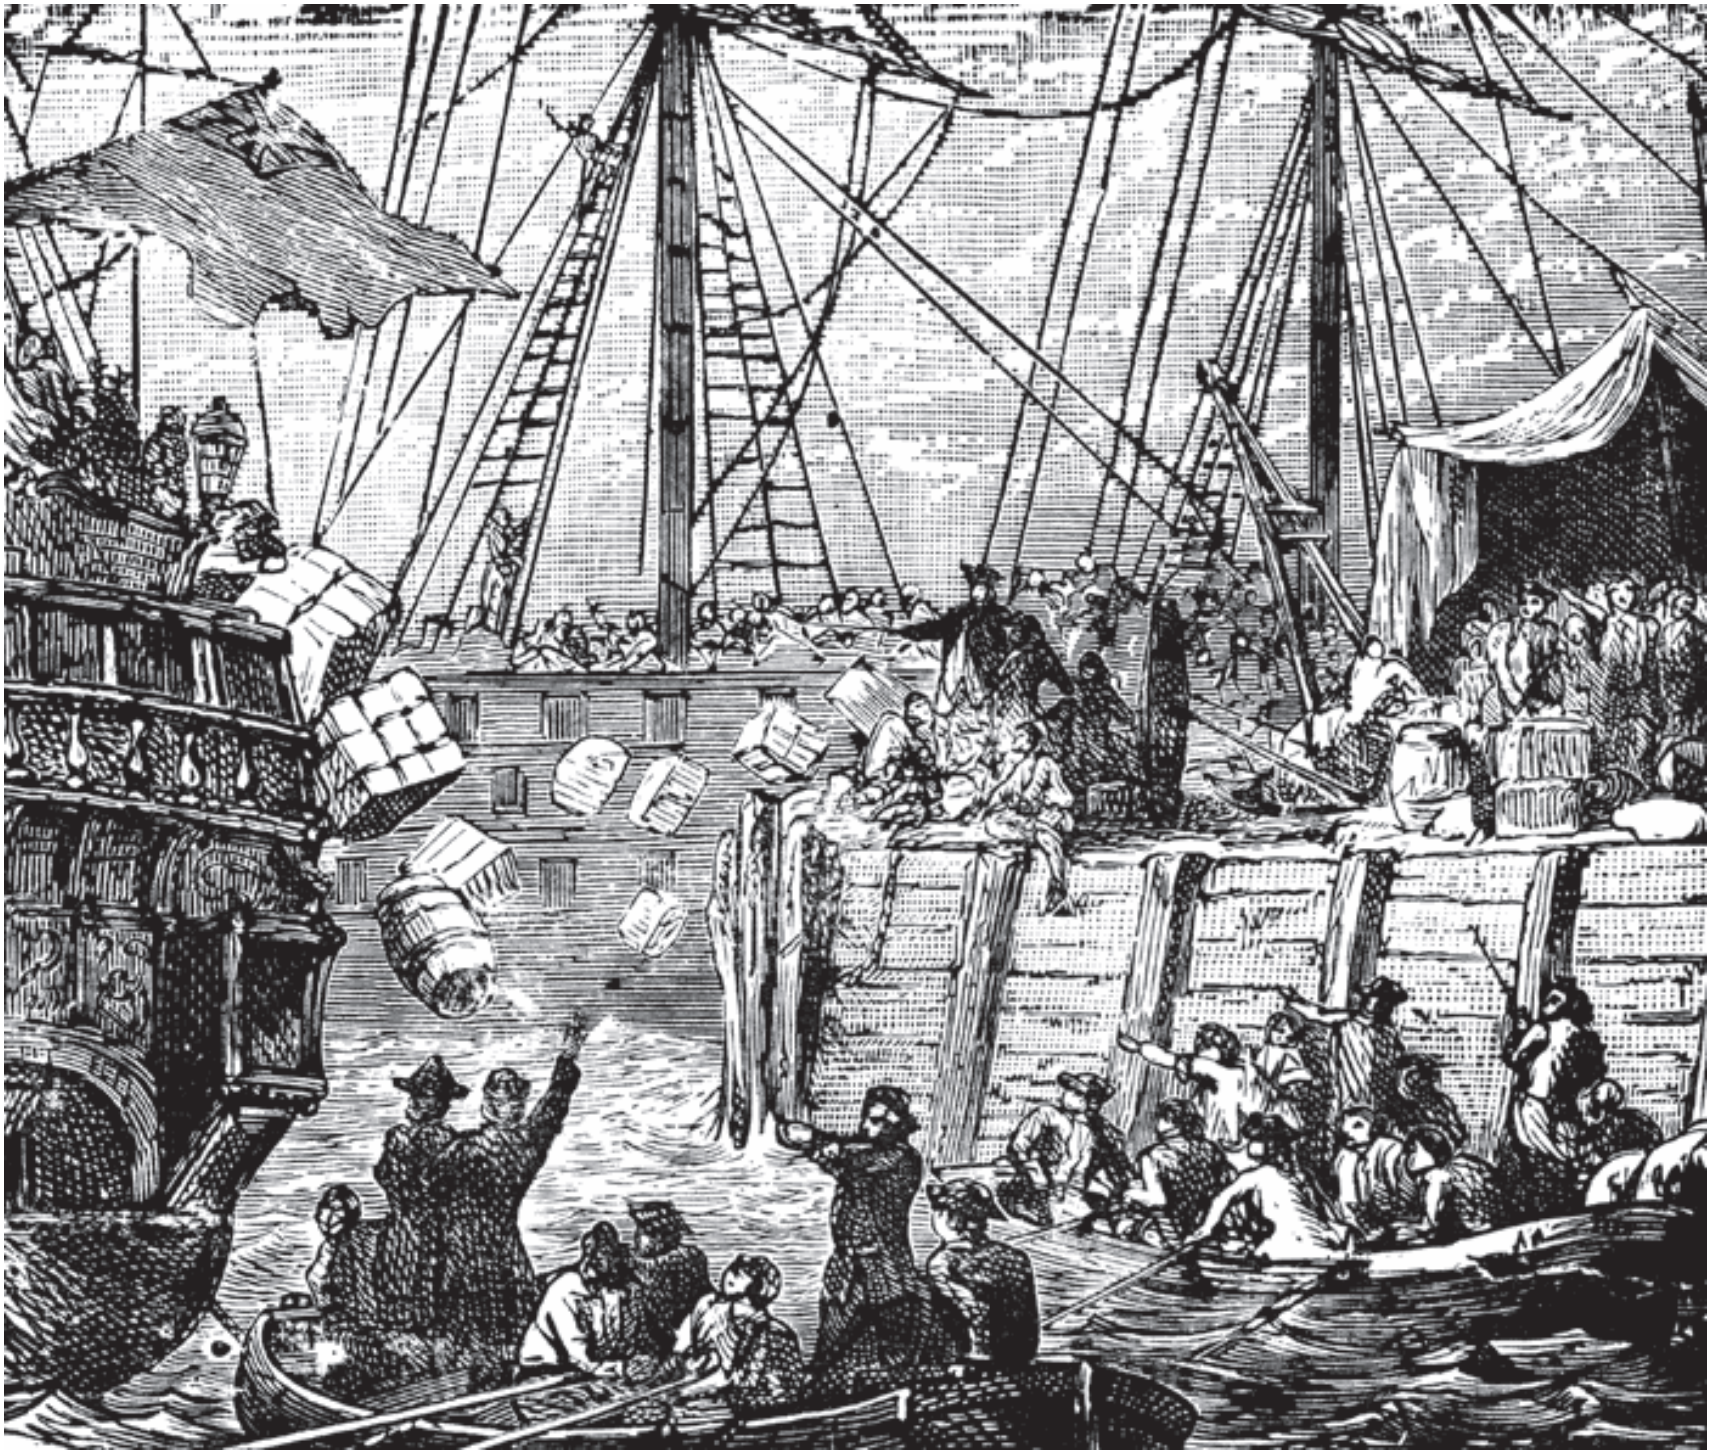
The Book of Tea
Okakura Kakuzo

“I did send for a cup of tee (a China drink) of which I never had drank before.”

Samuel Pepys, 1660



East India Company



Tea consumption sharply decreased in America during and after the Revolution, when many Americans switched from drinking tea to drinking coffee, considering tea drinking to be unpatriotic.

“Tea is the ultimate mental and medical remedy and has the ability to make one’s life more full and complete.”

Eisai, 1211

L-theanine and caffeine

“Where there’s tea, there’s hope.”
